BIOGRAPHY

Anthropologist Melville Jean Herskovits was born in Bellefontaine, Ohio, on September 10, 1895. His father, Herman Herskovits, a clothing merchant, had come to the United States from the Austro-Hungarian Empire (now a part of Czechoslovakia) in 1872; his mother, the former Henrietta Hart, emigrated from Germany around 1880. Because of Mrs. Herskovits' poor health, the family left Ohio for El Paso, Texas, about 1905. In 1911 after his mother's death, Herskovits, with his father and sister, moved again to Erie, Pennsylvania. There he graduated from high school in 1912.

In 1915, Herskovits concurrently entered the University of Cincinnati and Hebrew Union College. His studies, however, were interrupted by World War I. After serving fifteen months in France as a private and private first class in the U.S. Army Medical Corps, he was discharged in 1919. He studied briefly at the University of Poitiers before returning to the United States to enter the University of Chicago, where he received a Ph.B. in history in 1920.

Herskovits turned to the study of anthropology in 1920, beginning graduate work at Columbia University under Franz Boas. In 1921, he received his A.M. and began his teaching career as an assistant at Columbia. He continued to work with Boas, receiving his Ph.D. in 1923 with a dissertation entitled The Cattle Complex in East Africa.

New York City, and especially Columbia, was an important center of anthropological activity in the 1920's, and Herskovits not only encountered ideas and disciplines that shaped his career, but also made lifelong friends. In addition to his work with Boas, Herskovits studied at the New School for Social Research with A. A. Goldenweiser and Thorstein Veblen. Among his colleagues and fellow students were Margaret Mead, Ruth Benedict, Elsie Clews Parsons, A. I. Hallowell, Malcolm Willey, and his future wife, Frances Shapiro, whom he married in Paris on July 12, 1924.

In 1923, Herskovits was named a fellow of the National Research Council Board of Biological Sciences, which enabled him to pursue three years of research into the physical anthropology of the American Negro. During the same period, he lectured at Columbia from 1924 until 1927, and, in 1925, served as an assistant professor of anthropology at Howard University. At Howard, as at Columbia, Herskovits became acquainted with a number of important individuals who became his friends and professional associates, including Alain Locke, E. Franklin Frazier, Ralph Bunche, Sterling Brown, and Charles H. Thompson.

Herskovits moved to Northwestern in 1927 as assistant professor of sociology, the only anthropologist in the department. He became an associate professor in 1931, a full professor in 1935, and presided over the creation of the department of anthropology to become its chairman in 1938. In 1961, Northwestern appointed Herskovits to the Chair of African Studies, the first such position in the United States.

Herskovits' long career as an anthropologist was punctuated and advanced by a series of field trips to study various aspects of Negro civilization. The first of these came in 1928 when, accompanied by Frances Herskovits and Morton Kahn, he did ethnographic field work among the Bush Negroes of Surinam (Dutch Guiana). The expedition was repeated in 1929. This work resulted in two books authored jointly with Frances Herskovits, Surinam Folk-lore and Rebel Destiny, as well as a number of articles.

Herskovits' studies of the Negro in the New World continued with trips to Haiti (1934), Trinidad (1939), and Brazil (1942). The most important works based on these experiences are Life in a Haitian Valley and Trinidad Village.

Although much of Herskovits' early work with New World cultures focused on the survival of African culture traits, he first studied an African culture in 1931. The Herskovits' expedition to West Africa was based in Dahomey, with additional work carried out in the Gold Coast and Nigeria. These studies resulted in a number of publications, principally An Outline of Dahomean Religious Belief and Dahomey: An Ancient West African Kingdom.

During the middle period of his career, Herskovits' publishing efforts included not only ethnological studies based on field experience, but also a few influential general works. As one of twenty collaborators with Gunnar Myrdal in the landmark Carnegie Corporation study of the Negro in the United States, Herskovits produced The Myth of the Negro Past, in which he exploded pervasive racial myths by tracing American Negro culture to its roots in West Africa. Equally important, though perhaps less timely, were two other works: The Economic Life of Primitive Peoples, a general survey of primitive economics, and Man and His Works, a survey of cultural anthropology, both descriptive and theoretical, that has often been used as a text.

Herskovits' anthropological work was partially interrupted during World War II, when he used his skills in government service. In addition to acting as chief consultant to the Board of Economic Warfare, he was a member of the Council on Human Relations of the Forestry Service of the Department of Agriculture, and of the advisory committee on music of the State Department's Division of Cultural Cooperation.

After the war Herskovits again turned his full attention to Africa. One immediate result of the war in America was a heightened awareness of the importance of international communication; this led several scholarly organizations, among them the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council, to investigate the possibilities of establishing area studies programs. In 1948, with the support of a grant from the Carnegie Corporation, Herskovits organized the courses with African content that Northwestern had offered since the 1930's into the nation's first interdisciplinary Program of African Studies. Through this program, he directed the field research of numerous graduate students who matured into the second generation of American Africanists.

Additional study of his own followed as well; Herskovits returned to Africa for field work in 1953, 1954, 1955, 1957, and 1962. In 1957-1958 he presided over the founding of the African Studies Association. A report on U.S. foreign policy toward Africa that he prepared for the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1960 played a major role in the formulation of subsequent relations between the two continents. Three of Herskovits' last books, Continuity and Change in African Cultures (a collection of articles by Herskovits' students, edited and introduced by Herskovits and William Bascom), Economic Transition in Africa (a collection of conference papers edited, introduced, and summarized by Herskovits and Mitchell Harwitz and published after Herskovits' death), and The Human Factor in Changing Africa, reflect both the rapid development of Africa's place in the world and the increased academic interest in African studies.

Throughout his career, Herskovits was very active in professional organizations, and the list of his awards and honors is long. He contributed summary articles on the state of anthropology to various publications, edited The American Anthropologist from 1949 through 1952, and served as editor of the International Directory of Anthropologists in 1950. In addition to his presidency of the African Studies Association in 1957-1958, he was president of the American Folklore Society (1945), vice-president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (1934), a member of the executive board of the American Anthropological Association (1947), and a member of the permanent council of the International Anthropology Congress. He was a pivotal figure in the organization of the First International Congress of Africanists, held in Ghana in 1962. He was a Guggenheim Foundation Fellow, a Viking Fund Medalist, an honorary fellow of both the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and the Royal Netherlands Geographical Society, and a member of the National Academy of Sciences and Sigma Xi. He was decorated by the governments of the Netherlands and Haiti, and throughout his career, he served on countless professional committees.

Melville Herskovits died in Evanston, Illinois, on February 25, 1963. His wife and collaborator, Frances S. Herskovits, died in 1972. Their daughter, Jean Frances (born in 1935), is a historian specializing in Africa.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PAPERS

The Melville J. Herskovits Papers document Herskovits' career during a period of very rapid growth of both anthropology and African studies. Professional correspondence and manuscripts of publications make up the bulk of the collection, although other material is included as well. A small amount of material relating to Herskovits' personal life is also present, particularly in the general files.

The collection is divided into five subseries: General Files, Foreign Relations Committee Report Files, Student Field Notes, and Photographs.

General Files. These files consist primarily of Herskovits' professional and, to a lesser extent, personal correspondence. In addition to correspondence, various other materials are to be found here, including minutes and agendas of meetings, press clippings, official reports, and similar items. A small portion of the material is in languages other than English, with French and Portuguese predominating.

For the most part, Herskovits' original file order has been maintained. The files are arranged alphabetically by folder title within a chronological framework. Files covering the years 1906 through 1942 are arranged alphabetically by folder title, as are those from 1943 through August 1944; September 1944 through August 1946; and September 1946 through August 1948. Individual files arranged alphabetically by folder title exist for each academic year (September-August) from September 1948 through August 1961. A final alphabetical subject file covers the period from September 1961 through August 1963.

Within each folder, arrangement is generally chronological. The major exception to this rule is the miscellaneous file for each letter of the alphabet, in which material is arranged alphabetically by subject or correspondent, then filed chronologically within these subdivisions.

In general, Herskovits filed letters and related material according to the surname of the correspondent. In many cases, however, subject headings or names of organizations were used instead.

(This filing scheme seems to have been determined partially by the extent of Herskovits' personal relationship with each correspondent.) Also, similar material was filed under varying folder titles in succeeding years. As a result of these inconsistencies, related material can often be found under more than one file heading. The researcher should use all possible access points, including the names of individuals, organizations, and institutions and appropriate subject headings.

The general files are especially valuable as a source of information about the issues and personalities that shaped the disciplines of anthropology and African studies. Herskovits corresponded regularly with many of the most prominent people in his field, and these letters, combined with lengthy files concerning the activities of various professional committees, provide a detailed picture of the shifting interests and emerging professionalism that characterized these areas of study during Herskovits' lifetime.

Foreign Relations Committee Report Files. These files concern the report that Herskovits prepared in 1960 for the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. The first part of the file consists of research materials arranged according to Herskovits' own classification scheme. These folders contain partial drafts of the report, as well as notes and background information such as clippings. The second section includes various drafts of the report, including the final one. The final section is composed of administrative files produced in the course of the project. Correspondence, dating from both before and after the report was issued, is found here, as is material concerning staffing and the acquisition of necessary information.

Student Field Notes. This file contains notes produced by Herskovits' students while engaged in field work (generally, though not always, in Africa) for their dissertations. The notes are arranged alphabetically by the surname of the student, except for one group of oversized notes. These are filed at the end of the alphabetical sequence. Within each student's notes, the arrangement imposed by the student has been maintained. In a few cases, the original arrangement was not clear; these are so noted.

Writings. The Writings file consists of six parts: Books, Articles and Miscellaneous Writings, Book Reviews, Research Materials, Card Files, and Course Materials. Not all of Herskovits' publications are represented here. Material relating to books includes one or more drafts written by Herskovits alone or with other authors. Generally, when more than one draft is present, successive drafts are labeled Draft 1, Draft 2, and so forth. Some drafts are incomplete. The material is arranged alphabetically by title.

Material relating to articles and miscellaneous writings consists mainly of drafts of articles, supplemented by a few lectures, encyclopedia entries, biographical notes, and similar items. Again, more than one draft is often present; multiple drafts are foldered together. Arrangement is alphabetical by title.

Book reviews are arranged alphabetically by the title of the book reviewed. When several boxes are reviewed together in one review article, only the first title is indicated in the container list. Again, multiple drafts are foldered together.

The research materials, which include a small amount of material on the Rroo and the African Ethnic Card Project, consist primarily of physical anthropology data collected during the 1910's and 1920's. This material is divided generally into forms, tabulations, and calculations. Whenever possible, the folders are labeled more precisely as to the source and specific nature of the data. The card files were used to organize information for various manuscripts. The cards have been bundled into groups as found, then boxed. See the container list for the specific contents of this file.

The course materials begin with Herskovits' own lecture notes from a course he took with Boas in 1922. Lecture notes, bibliographies, and other material pertaining to courses Herskovits taught follow. The file is arranged by course title. A portion of the material found here is undated; apparently the same material was used when a course was offered in succeeding years.

Photographs. Photographs, lantern slides, and contemporary slides are included here, many of them identified only generally or not at all. Any identifying information found, however sparse, is noted in the container list.

Provenance: The Melville J. Herskovits Papers were donated to the Northwestern University Library by Frances Herskovits on November 1, 1963.

Restrictions: The original restrictions on access to the Melville J. Herskovits Papers were modified by Jean Herskovits on February 7, 1979. All material dating after the close of calendar year 1952 is closed to researchers until 1988, except with the explicit permission of Jean Herskovits. See pertinent correspondence in the Africana Archives Files.

Processor: Lisa B. Williams, February 1982.

Description of the additions (Box 187, Folders 1-2)

One folder of "Personnel List of Africa," installments 1-3 (1942-43) and a copy of Herskovits' article, "The Ancestry of the American Negro," which appeared in The American Scholar, have been added to the papers.

Compiled under the auspices of the Committee on the Anthropology of Africa of the National Research Council, the Personnel Lists were compilations of names of persons familiar with the colonies, territories, and countries of Africa supplemented with data relating to these persons' African experiences and expertise. The Lists were made available to National War Agencies through the Ethnographic Board of the Smithsonian Institution. Herskovits chaired the Committee that prepared the Lists.
