Loujon Press and The Outsider Collections

The Outsider magazine edited and published by Jon and Louise Webb of Loujon Press served as a vehicle for the early writings of avant-garde authors and Beat Generation poets of the 1960s such as Allen Ginsberg, Gregory Corso, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Gary Snyder, Charles Bukowsky, William Burroughs, Charles Olson, Louis Zukofsky, Norman Mailer, Diane DiPrima and Henry Miller. These manuscripts and production files are at Northwestern because the Library and Special Collections offered financial support to the Loujon Press for many years.

This collection contains the working files of all five issues of The Outsider published between 1961 and 1969, including manuscripts, correspondence, photographs, drawings and cover plates. The production files with color separations and zinc blocks for Henry Miller's Insomnia or the Devil at Large (Loujon Press, 1970), are also included (series LXXXIII).

The alphabetical listing of authors and individual cards in the manuscript file indicate in which of the issues works appeared. The collection is arranged by issue so that all material for each appears in its own alphabetical sequence. No inventory exists box by box.

For related material see the Jan Herman, Carl Weissner and Agentzia Collections.
